

Major Mark Buchy graduated from the University of Virginia in May of 2002 with a bachelors of arts in Foreign Affairs East Asia and a Minor in History. In 2008 he earned a Master's in Military History World War II graduating Dean's List with honors from American Military University. Major Buchy is attending the University of North Texas to earn a second Masters degree in Military History and successively proceeds to the U.S. Air Force Academy to teach in the history department.

The areas of history that interest him the most include small unit, guerrilla type warfare and instances of operational level mission successes resulting from adaption to circumstance. His thesis focuses on the tactical level changes the U.S. Army reluctantly espoused on the Texas frontier prior to the Civil War.

A staunch advocate of all areas of historical education, Major Buchy endeavors to raise the quality of life of the individuals around him.
